Account of Small-Pox.

Account of Small-Pox.

The French liner La Gascogne reached port to-day from Havre, but was detained at Quarantine for fumigation, having small-pox in the steerage.

She brings 243 in the cabin and 139 steerage passengers.

The patient, Giovanni Cittadin, aged nineteen years, was sent to a hospital and 122 of his fellow-steerage passengers to Hoffman Island for observation. The steamship was disinfected.

Among the passengers were six members of the French Commission to the St. Louis Exposition, headed by Commissioner-General La Grave; Commissioner-General La Grave; Commissioner Maguin, Vice-President of the French section; Roger Bouvard, architect of the French exhibit; Mr. Lamy, Secretary; M. Saglio, special commissioner of the fine arts department; M. Di Montarnel, architect, and Le Coeur, who will build the pavilion.

Prices Scare All Housewives and the Chicago Trust Is Blamed for the Raise in Meat of Al

"Twenty-six cents a pound for a por terhouse steak!" exclaimed a house-wife in Jefferson Market this morning 'Why, I suppose you'll be wanting t come around and draw my husband's salary next. I just won't deal with you any more." Then she flounced out of any more." Then she hounced out of the butcher shop and went to another establishment, where a similar price was quoted to her.
"Well, how do you sell chickens?" she asked in desperation.
"They're up, too," responded the butcher. "It's all owing to the Beef Trust. Them Chicago fellows are beginning to boost prices again. We held back for a while, but we found that we couldn't make any profit, and now we have to raise the rates, too." The woman bought a bluefish, and declared she was going to induce her husband to become a vegetarian.

The meat combine started out by raising the price of beef and mutton. Then it sent up pork. Representatives of the Chicago packers said these increases, ranging from 10 to 25 per cent, were due to the fluctuation of supply and demand.

A member of the firm of Maurer & Miller, commission merchants in Fulton Market, said the trust had obtained contemplated sending the price up along with a general advance in beef, mutton and pork.

Retail men say the packers are defying the injunction order issued by Judge Grosscup several months ago. the butcher shop and went to another
